ORGANIZATION OF THIS DOCUMENT

The authorized resource lists for Knowledge and Employability courses are organized by subject/occupational strand. The lists are organized as follows:

Authorized Resources Listed by Subject (Grades 8–12)

Student Basic Resources are listed alphabetically within each grade, followed by Student Support Resources and Teaching Resources. Each entry provides the following information:

- series name (if applicable)
- title of resource
- authorization category (student basic, student support, teaching)
- grades authorized for
- vendor/distributor name, order number and price
- other Knowledge and Employability subjects authorized for (if any).

Annotated Bibliography Listed Alphabetically by Title

- series name (if applicable)
- title of resource
- type of resource—the annotation has an icon of the type of the resource (e.g., print, video, CD-ROM)
- authorization category (student basic, student support, teaching)
- grades authorized for
- subjects authorized for
- vendor/distributor name, order number and price
- annotations for novels and nonfiction appear in the Novels and Nonfiction listing.

RESOURCE AUTHORIZATION CATEGORIES

Knowledge and Employability Resources

The resource lists for Knowledge and Employability courses contain learning and teaching resources that have been authorized for use in Alberta schools.

Alberta Education selects and authorizes resources to support the implementation of programs of study. Teachers are encouraged to select resources that meet the diverse learning needs of students they teach. The resource authorization categories are student basic, student support or teaching:

Student Basic learning resources are those student learning resources authorized by Alberta Education as the most appropriate for addressing the majority of outcomes of the course(s) or substantial components of the course(s); or the most appropriate for meeting general outcomes across two or more grade levels.

Student Support learning resources are those student learning resources authorized by Alberta Education to assist in addressing some of the outcomes of the course(s) or components of the course(s); or to assist in meeting the outcomes across two or more grade levels.

Teaching resources are those teaching resources identified as the best available resources to support the implementation of programs of study and courses; they may be teacher guides to accompany student resources or teacher professional resources. The authorized teaching guides are listed with the student resources.

These resources are organized by grade, authorization status and title in alphabetical order. Series names are italicized. Grade level(s) are indicated beside each title and there is a cross-reference column to other Knowledge and Employability subjects on the right side of the page.

Note:

Alberta Education strongly recommends that teachers read all selections in the student resources and all activities in the teacher guides prior to using them with students. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community, and to the reading levels of students.

The Alberta Framework of Essential Competencies for Working, Learning and Living

Teaching Resource

Grade(s) 8, 9, 10, 11, 12

The Alberta Framework of Essential Competencies consists of a set of essential competencies (skills, knowledge and work effort) that promote success in everyday living. The folder also includes information that explains the framework and how it can be used. The competencies are organized into four dimensions: Building Personal Capacity, Interacting and Communicating, Planning and Managing, and Using Data and Computer Technology. Within each dimension there are two sub-competency areas; e.g., Building Personal Capacity is divided into Personal Management and Managing Transitions. The other sub-competency areas are Working with Others, Communicating (including ESL and literacy), Thinking, Achieving Results, Numeracy, and Computer Technology. Each competency has five performance indicators that can be taught and learned, and the outcome observed. An individual can start where he or she is and progress as he or she wishes. The individual competency statements are intended to be incorporated into new and existing curricula. The accompanying CD-ROM Action Planner is a Word document that encompasses the competencies and a self-assessment form that teachers may use with students in part or in whole to identify strengths and opportunities for growth.

Comments:

- Most of the competencies included in the Framework are not ones that people are usually hired for, but many are ones that people are often fired for lacking.

These resources, written at a Grade 3 level, describe animals, birds and reptiles of the rainforest. Each resource addresses a different animal; e.g., Bats has a range map, a chapter on eating habits, a chapter on life cycle and a chapter on how to identify bats. Each resource contains a glossary. The teacher's guides contain suggested questions and activities, and an answer key. These booklets could be used for free reading or research material.

Comments:

- Words that appear in the glossary are not bolded in the written material.
- Both questions and activities are very elementary in appearance and in skills required, resembling blackline masters.

Big Burn is a story about two teens on Eastern Canada's coastline. The story focuses on responsible citizenship and proactive problem solving, as the characters take on a big company to protect their community from the company's toxic waste dumping. The novel is written at a lower level and is easy for students to read.

Comments:

- The resource does not include a teacher's guide.
- Big Burn offers opportunities to integrate with Knowledge and Employability Science on environmental issues.

Cautions:

- The resource contains two instances of inappropriate language or behaviour.
 - Alberta Education strongly recommends that teachers preview this resource. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community.

The Boldprint series poses ideas, problems and situations of emerging interest to students. The series includes specific Canadian content, the topics are current, the layout is engaging and the text is organized in short segments that are easy to read. Each book is organized around a theme or topic and many of the books focus on the real world. The resource contains a variety of genres: factual articles, poetry, legends, photo essays, short stories, news articles, comics, photographs, opinions, diaries and interviews. Also included are job descriptions, art techniques, art history, literacy skills and reading strategies. The student books are visually appealing with coloured pages, illustrations and photographs. The readings provide warm-up, checkpoint and follow-up (metacognition) questions. Skill development opportunities include the creation of text and illustrations, role-playing, e-mail writing, debating and dramatic skills, managing information, using technology and working with others. The teaching resources contain a chart that identifies the genre, three levels of reading accessibility (accessible, requires guidance, requires focused support) and main reading and responding strategies for each selection. The lesson plans for each selection explain the before-reading warm-up, during-reading checkpoint and after-reading opportunities by revisiting text, wrapping-up and extending the theme. Blackline masters are included to support the development of literacy skills. A literacy skills checklist, assessment strategies, genre cards, project cards and self-assessment profiles are provided. Dog Tales features dogs and their lives. Shivers takes a look at ghosts, witches and other scary fantasies, using both fact and fiction. SOS! Rescue Heroes tells the true stories of a number of rescues by both human and animal heroes.

Cautions:

- There is controversial material throughout this series; however, it is presented for critical examination. Material is included that some may find offensive.
 - Teachers are advised to use the resources with caution and selectivity by taking into account their particular group of students and the individuals within that group.
 - Web sites are referenced that have not been reviewed by Alberta Education. Web searching is encouraged in the resources; however, no guidelines for searching are provided.
 - Animal rights are dealt with and the topic of euthanasia is included in Dog Tales.
 - Individuals who do not like scary material may not enjoy Shivers.
 - SOS! Rescue Heroes may be difficult for some who have experienced life-and-death situations, including the death of someone close to them, and are not emotionally prepared to explore the topic in an academic setting.

Cautions:

- There is controversial material throughout this series; however, it is presented for critical examination. Material is included that some may find offensive.
- Teachers are advised to use the resources with caution and selectivity by taking into account their group of students and the individuals within that group.
- Web sites are referenced that have not been reviewed by Alberta Education. Web searching is encouraged in the resources; however, no guidelines for searching are provided.
- The explorer's quiz on pages 37 and 48 of Boundary Busters lacks respect for the diversity of human nature and teachers are advised not to use this quiz.
- Animal rights are covered in Monsters.
- Environmental issues are dealt with in The Wild West.

The engaging stories and activities feature karate, judo and kung fu and the masters who practise them. Predators takes a factual look at the predator side of animals. Stomp It! portrays board sports and riders.

Cautions:

- Teachers are advised to use the resources with caution and selectivity by taking into account their group of students and the individuals within that group.
- Web sites are referenced that have not been reviewed by Alberta Education. Web searching is encouraged in the resources; however, no guidelines for searching are provided.
- Teachers will want to review the poem in Friends called "I Fit In," by Michelle Cutting, prior to using it in the classroom.
- In Friends, "A Long Ride Home" has a comment about a dying dog, "... some of his insides were hanging out on to the ground underneath him." This will be disturbing to readers.
- Haven't Got a Clue mentions suicide and also references Ninja warriors and includes descriptions of their weapons.
- Martial Arts includes graphic descriptions of suicide; e.g., "... honor was so important to the samurai that they would frequently take their own lives in the face of failure ..." and a procedure for this type of suicide was to "... cut open his stomach."
- Predators contains graphic animal photographs and true stories that may be offensive to some individuals.

Blackline masters are included to support the development of literacy skills. A literacy skills checklist, assessment strategies, genre cards, project cards and self-assessment profiles are provided. The Grade 8 purple set of resources includes Faceoff!, a multidimensional look at Canada's national game. There is equal consideration of the female gender in usually male-dominated areas. Art Scene focuses on a variety of artists, discusses how they work and provides insight into who they are as individuals. Adventure Travel features 11 travel destinations that provide a sense of adventure and are highly engaging. Video Games follows the development of video games, showcases the people who come together to create the games and discusses the game-rage phenomenon. The Beat (The Music Scene) takes a broad look at the current music scene, including the phenomenon of "everyone wants to be a rock star." Sticks and Stones discusses bullying in a youth context.

Cautions:

- Some of the resources contain potentially problematic/sensitive topics. These include an emphasis on and tacit acceptance of violence.
- Bullying, however, is a counterbalance to violence because the entire resource is devoted to the prevention of bullying.
- In Adventure Travel, there is graphic detail of leopards suffering and dying. This provides opportunities for discussion. There are also some references to sensitive religious issues and individuals with disabilities. The references are presented to students for critical examination; however, teachers are advised to discuss them with extreme caution.

A literacy skills checklist, assessment strategies, genre cards, project cards and self-assessment profiles are provided. Beyond Reality discusses a series of science fiction issues. Games provides an interesting look at a number of games; e.g., chess, monopoly, cards, pinball and paintball. Headlines presents an opportunity for a critical examination of a number of current news stories. Me! Healthy Body, Healthy Mind presents information on a number of issues from the point of view of a healthy mind and body. Rides takes a look at driving cars from various points of view. Warriors: The Art of War examines a number of war icons; e.g., Samurai, Ninja, Joan of Arc and the Trojan horse.

Cautions:

- There is controversial material throughout this series; however, it is presented for critical examination. Material is included that some may find offensive.
- Teachers are advised to use the resources with caution and selectivity by taking into account their particular group of students and the individuals within that group.
- Web sites are referenced that have not been reviewed by Alberta Education. Web searching is encouraged in the resources; however, no guidelines for searching are provided.
- Games includes a card game called "Beggar My Neighbour" and contains other negative economic references.
- Me! Healthy Body, Healthy Mind includes references to body piercing, eating disorders and steroids.
- Warriors: The Art of War includes references that appear to glorify war and references to suicide (hara-kiri); e.g., "King Shaka killed 7000 people in his mother's name ..." and "... dying, but emphasis on glory and honor."

The Boldprint series poses ideas, problems and situations of emerging interest to students. The series includes specific Canadian content, the topics are current, the layout is engaging and the text is organized in short segments that are easy to read. Each book is organized around a theme or topic and many of the books focus on the real world. The resource contains a variety of genres: factual articles, poetry, legends, photo essays, short stories, news articles, comics, photographs, opinions, diaries and interviews. Also included are job descriptions, art techniques, art history, literacy skills and reading strategies. The student books are visually appealing with coloured pages, illustrations and photographs. The readings provide warm-up, checkpoint and follow-up (metacognition) questions. Skill development opportunities include the creation of text and illustrations, role-playing, e-mail writing, debating and dramatic skills, managing information, using technology and working with others. The teaching resources contain a chart that identifies the genre, three levels of reading accessibility (accessible, requires guidance, requires focused support) and main reading and responding strategies for each selection. The lesson plans for each selection explain the before-reading warm-up, during-reading checkpoint and after-reading opportunities by revisiting text, wrapping-up and extending the theme. Blackline masters are included to support the development of literacy skills. A literacy skills checklist, assessment strategies, genre cards, project cards and self-assessment profiles are provided. Above the Rim features basketball, feats, issues and the accomplishments of individual athletes. Hip Hop explores the hip hop phenomenon, the people, the rhymes and fashion. Love 101 is about romantic love, famous couples and celebrations of love. Movin' On tells of dreams, careers and success. This book examines how various individuals took their dream and turned it into a successful career. Roots examines the issues of immigrants to Canada and tells their stories. Shattered! Tragedy and Triumph covers a range of events that shattered people's lives and tells how they are dealing with those events.

Cautions:

- There is controversial material throughout this series; however, it is presented for critical examination. Material is included that some may find offensive. Teachers are advised to use the resources with caution and selectivity by taking into account their particular group of students and the individuals within that group.
- The books for this grade deal with topics of death, racial discrimination and immigration.
- The "Lost People" section of Shattered! consists of "... childhood memories of First Nations people whose lives were shattered when they were torn from their parents and sent away to school." Most of the references are to life in residential schools; e.g., "... the first thing to be done was to cut his long hair ..." (page 26); "That's savage he said ..." (page 26); "... they said we must get civilized ..." (page 27).

Breakthroughs in Critical Reading aims to teach students to understand what they read by identifying the main idea and details, summarizing and paraphrasing, and recognizing the organization of ideas. The resource covers a variety of topics related to critical reading and thinking skills, including comprehension, vocabulary, inferring, predicting and identifying persuasive techniques. The resource consists of five chapters, which provide selected readings, pre- and post-tests, and special exercises on comprehension (12 exercises), vocabulary (nine questions) and study skills (one exercise). The post-test consists of 30 multiple choice questions with an answer key given at the back of the workbook. A summary chart is also included, with the skills cross-referenced to the question number.

Cautions:

- Potentially sensitive topics include Yeti, traumatic events, fortune telling and dream premonitions, and generalizations about parents and politicians.
 - Teachers are advised to familiarize themselves with the content of the resource before using it with students. Teachers will want to make sure that materials are presented in context and that negative references are balanced with positive references.
 - Another essay should be substituted for "The Effects of Crack on Babies."

Carving My Name is a collection of nine short stories by Canadian author Mary-Kate McDonald. The stories focus on young people who are asked to become adults before their time. The characters are faced with a number of difficult situations as they and their parents experience loss, remarriage, mental illness and other challenges. Although the characters have feelings of grief, loneliness, pain and betrayal, they are sustained through these challenges by their courage, resilience, friendship and loyalty. These stories are recommended for teacher-directed use, especially as a starting point for discussion.

Comments:

- The resource does not include a teacher's guide.

Cautions:

- The stories contain some inappropriate language and deal with sensitive issues, including death, suicide, abuse and sexual orientation.
 - Alberta Education strongly recommends that teachers preview this resource. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community.

This teacher professional resource offers a collection of classroom teaching strategies that can be applied to a variety of subject areas. The resource describes over 45 different strategies, providing step-by-step instructions on how to use them, as well as examples, variations and advantages of each. The book addresses cognitive processes, such as activating/focusing, selecting/organizing and integrating/applying. It also examines a variety of text frames, such as cause/effect, concept/definition, problem/solution, compare/contrast and proposition/support. A section on student activities addresses developing vocabulary, brainstorming ideas, learning cooperatively, promoting discussion, encouraging writing and building study skills. This section also promotes interactive reading and graphic representation of thoughts and ideas.

This set of resources addresses reading comprehension under the following six concepts: facts, main idea, sequence, context, conclusion and inference. At each reading level from Grade 2 to Grade 6, there is a booklet for each concept. The booklets consist of brief articles focusing on the concepts to be mastered, followed by quick activities and questions. Answers are in the back of the booklets for students to check their responses, and a Student Profile Chart is included for students to record their progress. These booklets could be used independently by students, and would be best used to supplement a comprehensive reading program.

Comments:

- The booklets tend to be elementary in appearance; however, they are nonthreatening and should provide high success rates and feelings of accomplishment for students with reading difficulties.

This resource is a 4-DVD series covering research writing, fiction and nonfiction. Each DVD is chaptered and the titles include: Intermediate Media Literacy, Intermediate Fiction and Nonfiction, Intermediate Writing and Intermediate Research. Throughout the videos there are pre- and post-viewing questions and ideas for further study/activities. Students are asked to "think about..." or "write about..." and then carry on with the rest of the video. The resource also includes The Use of Multimedia in the Classroom teacher's guide.

Comments:

- Some students may be sensitive to the portrayal of Aboriginal people.
- There are some inappropriate references included in the excerpt on Malcolm X and there is a question to ask students that is inappropriate.
- The resource includes references to death and some students may be sensitive to these references.
- There are references to teacher guides available on the web but these have not been reviewed or authorized by Alberta Education.

This resource kit includes a hardcover student text, a teacher resource guide, a series of lab softcover books, a student motivation kit that includes laminated project and activity cards, reteaching and enrichment activities, and a CD-ROM with lesson plans and a test generator. There is a student workbook and a teacher annotated edition of the student workbook. Subjects include sewing, foods, personal development and career integration; e.g., money management for mathematics. Transition activities for students going into senior high school, e.g., peer pressure, self-actualization, self-concept, are included. The CD-ROM is easily accessible and includes a Word document copy of the student workbook and the teacher guide. An exam bank provides a very quick way to create a test. Posters for motivation in each area are engaging and the individual area teacher support books are well-organized and informative; e.g., the cooking component offers recipes applicable to the age group with clear instruction.

Comments:

- This resource is applicable to grades 8 and 9. Individual units and visuals may be appropriate at different grades.
- The kit is a starting point for new Knowledge and Employability students.
- Some of the student pictures are more appropriate for younger grades, yet others show senior high school students. Teachers should be sensitive to age-appropriate sections.

Each volume in this series describes the life and voyages of a different explorer, his interactions with Aboriginal people and how his exploration affected his own culture and the cultures of others. The resource provides contextual knowledge to support outcomes in social studies. The reading and writing aspects of the resource also support the language arts outcomes. The books contain graphics, maps, time lines, tables of contents and glossaries. They are visually appealing and laid out in an accessible manner. The teacher's guides include comprehension activities, short answer questions and extension activities. Students are asked to write creatively, linking what they have read to their own experiences, and to create artistic projects and connect ideas from their readings to describe the life and times of early explorers. Though assessment strategies are not provided, there is an answer key for the comprehension and short answer questions.

Comments:

- The books are American based and do not present information from a Canadian perspective (they also use American vocabulary and spellings).
- Some of the activities are not relevant to social studies and would be more appropriate for language arts.

This is a witty resource that could help teachers connect students to history by providing humorous and interesting anecdotes and a fresh perspective from which to approach history and historical issues. The resource is presented from a student's perspective and thus makes history more relevant. Most entries are between 5 and 10 pages long and with teacher guidance could be used to start discussion about historical events or people, or to enrich and bring the curriculum to life. The humour is irreverent but respectful of cultural and other differences. It is cognizant of differences in the values and identity of groups in Canadian history and of differences between then and now in terms of our perceptions. This teacher resource supports Knowledge and Employability Social Studies.

Comments:

- The vocabulary is difficult in places, but definitions of the most difficult terms appear in brackets, making the text easier to understand.
- Topics mentioned, such as death, war, addiction, animal testing and violence, may be sensitive for some students.
- Students should be made aware that the intent is to present information with humour but not disrespect.
- Community and student values will affect how teachers use this resource in the classroom.

Fright Write consists of four student readers, plus a teacher's guide. Each reader contains ten short high-interest fictional stories with low reading levels. Students may connect with the various stories in different ways by sharing personal experiences or feelings. Every story contains an element of suspense that holds the readers' attention and the situations that develop have an unexpected twist. For example, in It's a Mystery to Me, a game of hide and seek turns out to be a story of a different dimension. The student readers have inviting, visually appealing covers, and each story has a byline to engage the reader. Alongside the story, vocabulary definitions are provided and mid-story reflective questions are posed. Post-reading activities are also suggested.

The accompanying teacher's guide matches closely with the student readers. Each story has a corresponding lesson that introduces process writing in a different genre: scripts, audiotaped stories, comic books and travel tales. The lessons in the guide focus on various steps in the writing process, including prewriting, editing, drafting, revising and publishing. The resource moves students through a progression of activities, from "getting started" to "suggested culminating activities." Two activity sheets are included with each lesson.

Cautions:

- Alberta Education recommends that teachers familiarize themselves with each story before sharing with students.
- Knowledge of students' fears or phobias may influence the selections of stories.

F.X. looks at filmmaking techniques, breaking them down into understandable processes such as blue screen and computer graphics. Students could easily apply the techniques in this video to other viewing experiences. The video addresses viewing and representing outcomes for English language arts by assisting students to understand how film and graphic design techniques are used to create and/or manipulate emotion, mood and point of view. It also addresses outcomes in other courses, including communication technology, graphic arts, photography, filmmaking and drama. The video is fast-paced and engaging. The content is divided into sections that allow for starting and stopping and this facilitates discussion. Other titles authorized from this series are Big Buildings, Fly at Your Own Risk, Food, Garbage, Spaceships and Zero Gravity.

Comments:

- Programs in the Popular Mechanics for Kids series are fast paced and engaging. Topics are relevant and high interest. Excellent production quality ensures that the audience's interest and attention is maintained. Vocabulary and content are appropriate for students in Knowledge and Employability courses.
- Slapstick and "put down" type humour is used in an attempt to make the material more attractive to students.
- Young males are portrayed as being disaster-prone and clownish, which does not promote respect or a positive self-image.
- Violent incidents, such as a man with a baseball bat smashing a melon labelled "Tyler's head" and the use of racial stereotypes in the segment on martial arts special effects, are cause for concern.
- Teachers will need to preview this resource to see if it is age appropriate for their classes. The narrators for this series are a young boy and girl of approximately 11 or 12 years of age.

This series covers escapes, mysteries, firsts, heroes, adventures, challenges, disasters and rescues. The stories present the five W's in a user friendly format that resembles a newspaper style: a paragraph to set the scene, with details and facts following. The articles depict empowered women in equal representation with men and provide good examples of role models for young women. Following the stories are two pages of questions, with an answer key provided. There is a summary chart for these questions on the final page, with the outcomes paralleling the English language arts objectives. These articles could be used for reports or general free reading.

This teacher professional resource explores various alternative forms of assessment, providing the rationale and background for each. By incorporating the assessment tools suggested, teachers can promote strategies for student learning. The resource provides instructions on how to produce personal assessment tools and gives valuable examples of each. It deals with a variety of assessment methods, including learning standards, standardized tests, teacher-made tests, rubrics, portfolios, metacognitive reflection, observation checklists, graphic organizers and interviews. The 4th edition includes some new examples of rubrics, updated research on assessment, more emphasis on standards and more special education examples.

This resource consists of ten self-contained workbooks intended to supplement the Jamestown student texts for students at a middle level. Each workbook focuses on one of the following specific topics: vocabulary, main idea, making judgements, characters, drawing conclusions, making inferences, tone, literary forms, organization and significant detail. These topics parallel the Knowledge and Employability English language arts outcomes. Each of the ten volumes is divided into five parts: explanation, instruction, a sample exercise, 20 practice exercises and five or six writing activities. The writing activities include three questions and a self-directed assignment. Each of the 20 practice exercises is accompanied by four questions, and an answer key is provided for students to self-assess. These results can then be tabulated in a progress chart provided on the last page of each volume. Teachers can use the books to introduce particular skills in short, accessible lessons, or can have students work through specific books or sections for extra practice.

Comments:

- Once students have used the book to answer the four questions and tabulate their scores, the booklet cannot be used again for that purpose. To avoid this problem, teachers may want to photocopy the summary progress chart and have students answer the questions on a separate page.
- Some students may be overwhelmed by the number of workbooks.
- The volume on vocabulary contains all American content. Teachers may wish to substitute Canadian examples and/or supplement the resource with Canadian materials.
- The answer key is available to students; teachers may wish to remove it.
- The rating score at the bottom of the progress chart may not align with Alberta Education standards; teachers may wish to remove this as well. For these reasons, this resource is recommended as a teacher resource.

The Critical Reading Series is a set of 11 readers that provide nonfiction works and student exercises to build reading comprehension and critical thinking skills. The works presented in each reader deal with both current and historical topics from around the world. The stories have engaging themes, use appropriate vocabulary and include photographs. Stories are thematically grouped into three units per reader (for example, Monsters features stories related to myths that are divided into units based on the type of myth). Each story is followed by a set of exercises to strengthen reading comprehension and critical thinking, addressing the following skills: finding the main idea, recalling facts, making inferences, using words precisely, analyzing the author's approach, summarizing/paraphrasing and self-assessment. At the end of each unit, charts are provided to record student progress. Stories could be used for timed reading exercises.

Cautions:

- Alberta Education strongly recommends that teachers review activities prior to using them with students.
 - Depending on students' beliefs and levels of understanding, some themes may need to be addressed with caution (e.g., Aliens and UFOs).

This resource consists of a series of nine progressively challenging student workbooks, each about 200 pages in length. Students can start at a level appropriate to their abilities and change levels as needed. The main focus of the resource is on teaching students skills and strategies for reading and writing, but other general outcomes are inherent within suggested extension activities. The components are visually pleasing in their layout and format. Each level consists of 20 lessons, begins with background information and vocabulary, and is followed by short reading selections in various genres. The readings presented in the workbooks are high interest and are short enough that the student immediately sees completion as possible, making them appealing to Knowledge and Employability students. Each reading has one or two strategically placed breaks to reinforce previously introduced concepts, as well as a component on follow-up strategies. The workbooks include personal checklists, vocabulary and comprehension checks, extension activities with related resource links, and a graph for monitoring progress. Lessons can be used for timed readings if desired.

Comments:

- Level D is approximately equal to a Grade 4 reading level; subsequent levels are approximately one year higher than the previous level.
- The series is American, but content is generally nonspecific to location. Where location is specific, it is embedded in the story or article (e.g., in a historical account of the buffalo hunt).
- Matching annotated teacher's guides are available.

The Knowledge and Employability Studio is the online guide to implementation for the Knowledge and Employability courses. There are four levels in the Studio. The Main Lobby contains program updates, contact information, a video introduction and a virtual tour of the Studio. New update information is displayed on the screen in the lobby. Curriculum Foundations, found on Level 2, contains activities and strategies to support teachers and students with the implementation of four core subjects: English language arts, social studies, science and mathematics. Click on the title of the course for further information. Within each subject are folders that contain resources aligned with the program of studies outcomes within that subject area. Level 3 contains information on each of the occupational strands. Poster-like artwork displays the names of each strand. In the same manner as the second level, each icon, when opened, illustrates a collection of activities and strategies aligned with the program of studies outcomes within each occupational strand. Workstations for administrators, teachers, students, parents and industry are found on Level 4. The folders and resources function in the same manner as the other levels but reveal learning and teaching resources to support teachers, students and parents. The Administrators Workstation contains the Information Manual for Knowledge and Employability Courses. The Industry Workstation contains information for employers working with students in off-campus situations.

The Lady at Batoche chronicles the Métis rebellion in a tale of high adventure, combining numerous battle scenes with important historical details. Both the Canadian and the Métis side of this struggle are explored through the different viewpoints of the main characters. This book continues where the author's previous work, Soldier Boys, left off. The resource includes a teacher's guide that follows the same format for each of the 11 chapters: Focus (addressing significant events, characters, themes), Writer's Craft (addressing literary techniques), Speculation (posing questions), Comprehension Questions, Contexts (prompting student discussion) and Creative Work (offering extension activities and projects). General questions, a glossary and a short biography of the author are found at the back of the guide.

Comments:

- Activities and questions will need to be adapted and modified for Knowledge and Employability students.
 - A connection to the Knowledge and Employability social studies program of studies could be made through the theme of Canadian history.

This resource consists of a volume of Canadian short stories, as well as a complementary teacher resource on short fiction. The stories are relevant to teenagers who are dealing with "coming of age," exploring topics such as victory, loss, attraction and pregnancy. By exploring tough situations with no quick fixes, the stories allow readers to identify with the characters' difficult emotions and see how others deal with these situations. The characters represent a wide range of socio-economic groups, have authentic dialogues and deal realistically with the issues facing them. The writing styles and story lengths are varied to appeal to students with a range of abilities. For each selection, the teaching resource includes a summary of the story, a description of the skills and concepts related to instructional goals, and suggested teaching strategies, including pre- and post-reading activities. Suggested journal/personal writing topics are also provided for each selection. The stories would be useful for inspiring class discussion.

Cautions:

- The themes presented in many of the stories could raise a number of controversial issues. Although the teaching resource provides some background information on issues, teachers may require additional support materials to feel fully prepared to handle these issues.
- Alberta Education strongly recommends that teachers preview this resource. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community.

This historically accurate novel is centered around a ten-year-old Canadian-Italian girl living in Nova Scotia during World War II. The story explores the prejudice and discrimination that can be prompted by war as the girl's community turns against her because of her Italian heritage. Other themes that are dealt with in the resource include the need for understanding and forgiveness rather than revenge and hate, personal versus social needs, and the injustice of Canada's internment policy. Each of the sixteen chapters includes a prologue and an epilogue, as well as chapter headings to cue the reader. The book's reading level is low and chapters are short (six pages each). The teacher guide provides a general overview, unit focus, writer's craft notes, questions for reader response, speculation questions, a vocabulary section and suggestions for creative extension activities. A glossary of literary terms and an index are provided.

Comments:

- Because the main character is a ten-year-old female, the novel may not be appealing to the younger male audience.
- A few questions in the teacher's guide (first chapter) are aimed at too low a group and would have to be reworded for older students.
- There are no blackline masters included with the resource.
- A connection to the social studies program of studies could be made through the themes of internment and world conflict.

Cautions:

- Alberta Education strongly recommends that teachers preview this resource. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community.

This resource consists of a student text, workbook, CD-ROM and teacher's guide. The student text presents information in themes that support teaching and learning the Knowledge and Employability outcomes as well as most of the English language arts outcomes. Topics include looking up information, using dictionaries, using the telephone, using the library, finding information from media sources, filling out forms and shopping by catalogue. The resource is user friendly and hands-on. The text is clearly organized with headings and images to engage the student. Margins contain highlighted terms with definitions as well as a glossary. The text begins with a description of the best way to use the text and each lesson concludes with a review exercise. The student workbook reinforces the outcomes learned in the student text with easy follow-up exercises. The CD-ROM contains further exercises to help reinforce the learning and also details other methods of approaching the same topics. The teacher guide parallels the student text and provides information to guide the development of the basic skills in the student.

Comments:

Literacy Power deals with topics of interest to students in Knowledge and Employability courses. Each of the books has six units on different themes that include between three and six stories and/or poems followed by assignments to develop and improve language arts skills. Prereading strategies such as predicting, skimming and scanning, and interpreting pictures are outlined for the student. Each story has a vocabulary list with definitions for more difficult words and many of the short stories, ballads and cartoons contain recognizable Canadian content. Units have postreading activities and wrap-up assignments. These resources would be excellent supplementary resources because they meet reading and writing outcomes from several strands of the English language arts program of studies. Themes in book E include Myseries and Secrets, Media Mix, Technology and Inventions, and Expressions of Hope. Book F includes Heroes, Getting the Message, Identity, Media Body Science and Challenges. Book G includes Extreme Experiences, Communication, Disasters, Media and Popular Culture, Your Figure, Your World, and Justice. Themes for book H are Risking It All, The Way I See It, The Real Me, Media Messages, Calling Planet Earth, and War and Peace.

Comments:

- Answer keys and scoring rubrics are not provided with these student workbooks.
 - In general, the content of the booklets is very appropriate, although there are some references to violence, magic, social issues (e.g., bullying and child labour) and some mild derogatory language that may not be appropriate for all students.

This Canadian resource depicts the life of a 13-year-old Cree boy in Alberta. The video illustrates the positive qualities of responsibility, initiative and respect for one's traditions. It also compares and contrasts contemporary life and values with traditional Aboriginal lifestyles. This resource could be used to address the English language arts topics of viewing, listening and research. It also relates to topics in social studies, universal strategies and career development.

Cautions:

- The main character skins and stretches animal hides.
 - The boy's mother talks about having considered taking her own life when she was young, but states that she is glad she didn't.

This video outlines a six-step process to help students make healthy decisions. The problem-solving model presented involves identifying and clarifying the problem, recognizing different points of view, selecting and implementing the best solution, assessing the results and re-evaluating the solution based on new information. The second part of the video examines the differences between passive, aggressive and assertive behavior in a variety of scenarios that may be relevant to most Knowledge and Employability learners. Teenage characters demonstrate decision-making and assertiveness skills in everyday situations, including situations related to bullying, careers and cheating. Throughout the video a young host comments on the skills being illustrated and reviews the decision-making process. The resource encourages students to identify and describe different social and school situations requiring assertive, aggressive or passive behavior in self and others. Appropriate pre- and post-viewing teacher strategies are suggested.

Making It Work is a handbook of Canadian reading selections of various genres, along with lessons on strategies and skills related to reading, writing, language, media studies and grammar. Each lesson in the handbook is presented in a "how to" context, with guided sections leading the student through anticipatory focus questions, do-it-yourself questions, examples of literature, examples of student work (where applicable), post-lesson reflections, activities linked to The Road Ahead and suggested extension activities. The resource uses graphic organizers, an appendix and a glossary to reinforce concepts. The handbook has a visually pleasing two-colour layout that leads the student through sections of the lesson in a progressive manner, with instructional strategies visually identified. Activities are imaginative and cue the student to use various technologies.

Comments:

- Making It Work can be used together with The Road Ahead, an anthology of Canadian readings, as a basic text.

This resource consists of three video segments focusing on the influences of the media, particularly on the way that the media frequently uses human sexuality in its presentation of information, entertainment and music. The resource asks the question, "have we become desensitized?" Through discussion of these issues, students' awareness may be heightened, especially because teens are particularly vulnerable to the media's power of suggestion. The video promotes self-awareness and the responsible consumption of media messages. The examples in the video relate to the language arts and social studies outcomes on evaluating sources, and to the social studies outcomes on consumerism. The video uses recognizable examples from North American pop culture (TV, movies, magazines and music) to illustrate its discussion of various media-related issues. These examples are combined with on-the-street interviews and expert commentary by two professors and the senior editor of Seventeen magazine. The shows are segmented to allow for discussion or other mediated viewing.

Cautions:

- Nudity, sexual behaviours and gender orientations are depicted in this resource as a necessary part of the content.
- Alberta Education strongly recommends that teachers preview the video before using it with students.
- If possible, these sensitive issues should be dealt with as a way to heighten students' awareness of what is portrayed in the media, thus enabling them to make more informed choices.

Offside is a Canadian novel about a 15-year-old boy who inadvertently gets his hockey team hooked on a cold remedy drug, and then must decide how to fix the problem. The novel combines a sports theme with important issues of performance-enhancing drugs, peer pressure, family relationships and responsible decision making. The resource is written at a lower level and would be engaging for most students. This novel would work well in a teacher-directed class study. The accompanying teacher resource guide provides chapter summaries, speculation questions, comprehension questions, extension questions and essay questions. The guide also includes a glossary, bibliography and a list of related books, documentaries and Web resources.

Comments:

• The size of the book could be intimidating to some Knowledge and Employability students; however, the story is fast paced and easy to read.

Cautions:

• The novel contains some inappropriate language and refers to issues that may be sensitive for some students, including suicide, violence, drugs and manic depression.

This teacher resource was produced by the nonprofit Petroleum Communication Foundation with the intention of informing students, teachers and parents about petroleum and its relevance to our daily lives. The resource focuses on student participation and provides real world examples to make the petroleum industry come alive in classrooms. The booklet provides activities for classroom use along with some blackline masters. Student handouts give a background scenario and then pose questions as the basis of individual or group projects.

This series consists of four progressively challenging levels, each of which is complete and easy to use. Each level contains four fiction chapter books, two reference information books and two biographical stories. These student texts deal with relevant and engaging themes, such as growing up, relationships and resolving conflicts. Many of the characters in the stories are 14- or 15-years-old and provide viewpoints that would be familiar to Knowledge and Employability students. The biographical books tell the stories of young people (one male and one female) and focus on a life situation in which they were involved. The reference books provide background to understand topics that arise in the chapter books and biographies. The readers are modern, action-packed and respectful of Knowledge and Employability students' integrity. The resource includes a number of assessments: a reading placement test, end of selection tests, end of paperback tests, end of theme practice tests and end of level tests. There are also portfolio tips, ideas and assignments for students. A self-assessment checklist can be used to ensure completion of each component at each level and to mark progress.

The teacher's resource includes several items to support teachers in implementing the student texts. The Workout Book uses the first chapter of each paperback as a springboard for discussing reading strategies, word analysis skills, word identification strategies (phonics) and writing forms. The writing forms have excellent prompts that are not elementary in appearance. This resource is applicable to students of all skill levels, styles and experiences, including special needs and ESL students. It is especially relevant to the Knowledge and Employability student. The teacher resource includes many teaching strategies, tips and a classroom management wheel to help the teacher run the program in various ways.

This level of the Power Up! series is accompanied by Extension Library resources consisting of short pocketbook-size nonfiction readers. Each story includes colour photographs and a glossary with pronunciation help. The stories are also on audiocassette. The teacher resource package includes CDs, theme and strategy posters, information on implementing the reading program and blackline masters.

Cautions:

- Some of the stories begin with material that is negative or displays a lack of respect to others; however, in the reading there is always a positive outcome that teaches a moral. For this reason, each story needs to be read in its entirety and followed by discussion.

Read to Live provides information, strategies and activities that teachers can use to engage and support students who are experiencing difficulties with reading.

The focus is on helping students think about reading in a new way by connecting classroom experiences with students' lifeworlds.

This resource, which is a series of workshops to enhance student literacy at the junior and senior high school levels, is intended for teachers who are new to teaching, new to teaching students with reading difficulties or just looking for extra support. It can also be used by more experienced teachers to mentor colleagues and create a community of practice.

The first workshop, Introduction: Responsive Teaching, describes an approach to teaching reading that focuses on addressing students' unique learning needs.

This is followed by three more in-depth workshops, which explore different elements of reading: Contexts of Reading, Active Reading and Multiple Texts/ Multiple Literacies. Each of these workshops contains three sections: Background, Reading Strategies and Teaching Strategies.

The workshops can be explored in multiple sittings, in whatever way is most useful. Teachers can explore the information in any order; however, teachers new to teaching reading or to the concepts covered may find it most useful to start with the Background.

Background

The background section summarizes important concepts, research findings and other information on the topic. Links provide further information on relevant theorists and researchers.

Reading Strategies

The reading strategies section offers sample strategies teachers can model, teach and reinforce to help students become more effective readers. These strategies apply and build on the concepts in the background section.

Teaching Strategies

The teaching strategies section provides sample instructional strategies and activities teachers can use to strengthen students' understanding and motivation.

The Reading Advantage is a comprehensive resource that addresses the eight skills identified in the Knowledge and Employability English language arts programs of study. The resource focuses on providing support for the teacher and student to help improve reading skills. It provides cross-curricular connections to science and social studies while giving students opportunities at times to relate the information given to their own lives. The student texts are four themed magazines: Emotions, Racers and Racing, Boundaries and Ecology. These contain a variety of genres, including articles, letters, interviews, editorials, essays, photo essays, cartoons and diaries. They are visually appealing with coloured pages, illustrations and photographs. The teacher's edition provides teachers with before, during and after reading guidance, various reading strategies (explain, model, practise), suggestions for further activities and strategies for increased fluency. Assessment tools are provided for the specific outcomes of Level A. The student journal parallels the teacher's edition and the magazines and provides activities such as vocabulary building, phonics, word maps, compare and contrast, journal entries, context clues and various types of prose writing. The prose writing activities include a humorous scene, an advice column, sports commentary, tributes, travel brochures and persuasive writing. Poetry writing is also included. The word study manual provides techniques for word sorting and the integration of vocabulary into the classroom of the struggling reader. The eZines provide a CD-ROM that reads the articles out loud at various speeds and provides more suggestions for the teacher.

Cautions:

- Additional resources are identified in this resource, but have not been reviewed or authorized by Alberta Education. The resource contains American content; teachers may wish to substitute Canadian examples and/or supplement the resource with Canadian materials.

The Reading for Today series aims to teach reading skills by integrating sight words, phonics, comprehension, lifeskills and writing. The student book is divided into seven units with stories focusing on individuals in various everyday situations. Each unit ends with a review, and a final review is provided at the end of the book. Colourful and engaging photographs accompany the stories. The corresponding workbook consists of additional stories with blackline masters that take the student through additional exercises to build vocabulary, writing skills and comprehension. An answer key is included at the back of the workbook. Teachers can use this resource to choose specific stories and exercises for individual students.

Comments:

- The few forms that are included ask for state and zip code rather than the Canadian equivalents.
- The content and geographical location of all stories are American, but most of the lifeskills and situations dealt with are applicable to Canadian youth.
- This series was written for adult learners, but is useful for students in Knowledge and Employability.

The Reading for Today series aims to teach reading skills by integrating sight words, phonics, comprehension, life skills and writing. The student book is divided into seven units with stories focusing on individuals in various everyday situations. Each unit ends with a review, and a final review is provided at the end of the book. Colourful and engaging photographs accompany the stories. The corresponding workbook consists of additional stories with blackline masters that take the student through additional exercises to build vocabulary, writing skills and comprehension. An answer key is included at the back of the workbook. Teachers can use this resource to choose specific stories and exercises for individual students.

Comments:

- The few forms that are included ask for state and zip code rather than the Canadian equivalents.
- The content and geographical location of all stories are American, but most of the life skills and situations dealt with are applicable to Canadian youth.
- This series was written for adult learners, but is useful for students in Knowledge and Employability.

Cautions:

- Unit 6 of Book 6 deals with the issue of sexual harassment. Alberta Education strongly recommends that teachers preview this section prior to using it with students. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community.

This Canadian resource addresses a number of outcomes for English language arts. The text focuses on strategies for successful reading, writing, and oral and visual communication, and also helps students develop skills for research, representing and group work. The first section of the text comprehensively covers reading and writing skills, with 21 tutorials on these topics. There are various examples of written work, some by Canadian students. The second section focuses on technical writing, providing basic examples of technical and business writing concepts that students will need to enter the workforce. The third section, on oral and visual communication, prepares students for research assignments. Each outcome in the three sections is supported by tutorials, strategies, checklists, tips and activities. Each tutorial begins with learning outcomes and ends with tools for measuring success. The resource includes a teacher's guide that provides teaching tips, assessment suggestions, blackline masters and additional activities. It also contains a section on ESL and ESD students that suggests alternative activities.

Comments:

- Only one example is provided for most of the different types of reading materials and writing assignments; teachers will have to supplement these with additional examples for further student participation.

The Real World contains numerous newspaper articles, plays, comics, short stories, etc. on a wide variety of topics that would be of interest to most students. Each reading is followed by suggested activities that meet many outcomes in the program of studies. Students are engaged in group work, writing, reading, research and listening to complete many of the postreading activities. This resource would be an appropriate supplement to most media units conducted at the high school level for Knowledge and Employability. Activities and assignments would require further teacher development to be most effective. Assessment guides, criteria, etc. are not provided. Difficult vocabulary will need to be presented prior to each lesson.

This set of resources consists of two videos: one covering computerized searches and other skills for library research, the other looking at the development and use of the Internet for research purposes. The video presents introductory information that would be of use to more advanced students. For each element of research (e.g., computerized searches), two narrators break the process down into segments, introduce important terms and skills, and explain the rationale for using them. The video then illustrates their practical use.

Comments:

- The video presents a large volume of information at a quick pace, making teacher guidance necessary throughout. This video would be most useful for reviewing skills that have already been introduced and taught in smaller segments, or for use as a resource in the mainstream library.

The Road Ahead is an anthology that presents Canadian content in thematic units, with each selection linked to the Making It Work handbook. The anthology leads the student through the units in a progressive manner. Various genres are represented appropriately, and each selection is prefaced by a focus section and followed by a reflection section. Career development is featured through material on writing resumés and covering letters, as well as a sample interview. Throughout, the student is asked to reflect and provide self-assessment.

Comments:

- The Road Ahead can be used together with Making It Work: A Handbook for Reading, Writing, Language and Media.

This resource consists of four videos containing 40 clips on the topic of television. The clips discuss a variety of topics, including the media's role/responsibility in producing social change, the media's power of persuasion, the media's creation of separate environments to market products and services, and the political responsibilities related to the media. These topics parallel the outcomes for Knowledge and Employability English language arts. The clips are organized into five core Knowledge and Employability units: issues of representation, issues of persuasion, how media are constructed, the global impact of media, and converging technologies. For each clip, the accompanying teacher's guide includes the following sections: Before Viewing, where the issue is introduced and pre-existing knowledge is identified; Focus for Viewing, where guided discussion and questions are presented; and After Viewing, where activities and further questions are provided.

Comments:

- The Global Citizen clip in Video 4 could also be used for Knowledge and Employability Grade 10 Social Studies.

Cautions:

- There are four clips that come with a warning about the content and issues discussed. Alberta Education strongly recommends that teachers preview the clips before using them with students.
- It is also recommended that teachers use the teacher's guide to steer discussion and analysis of all clips.

Scholastic Action Classics consists of five novelettes (Hamlet, Antigone, Pride and Prejudice, The Scarlet Letter, Great Expectations), one book of poems and a teacher's guide. The novelettes are short, averaging 45 pages in length, and can be read quite quickly. They demonstrate the elements of a short story, including introduction, rising action, climax and ending. The teacher's guide provides a skills overview, novel summary, prereading exercises, target words, character identities, heads-up exercises, setting, response writing and comprehension checks. Reader's notes accompany the series with before reading, during reading and after reading activities for each of the books.

Comments:

- Topics in these novels include incidents of violence, suicide, adultery and incest. Teachers should carefully consider student and community standards before using these novels with a class.
- Discussion will be required to develop an understanding of the differences between society in the historical period depicted and the present day.

Titles in the Scholastic Action science series include That's Science, Weird Science, Medical Miracles, Tropical Rain Forest, Bear Attacks and Extreme Floods. The six student readers contain topics such as stories on planning and carrying out experiments that may enhance student's interest in Grade 8 Science. The readers provide opportunities for cross-curricular activities in language arts. Action readers are levelled to promote successful independent reading. The readers and note sheets are at three reading levels, ranging from Grade 1.5 to Grade 6 readability, and could be used for oral, large group or small group reading activities. Pictures and other visuals promote interest in the topics.

Comments:

- Teachers should be aware that some students may find the format consistent with books in elementary school and may be offended.
- Bear attacks, floods and tsunamis could be difficult topics for students who have experienced such events.
- Transplants and serious illnesses, discussed in Medical Miracles, may also be problematic for some students.
- Weird Science Jobs discusses topics such as forensic science and insects as a future food source and some students may find this unpalatable.
- Teachers should consider their students and communities when choosing which books to use.

This resource contains a teacher's guide, reader's notes and six different short books, all with a science fiction theme. The booklets are titled Invisible Boy, The Magic Paintbrush, Black Mirror, Joyride, City in the Clouds and See You Later, Gladiator. Each book contains a prereading activity that provides a context for reading, a target words section to introduce new vocabulary and a reader tips section that suggests reading strategies to assist students with reading comprehension. The teacher resource contains a skills overview for the series and suggests additional before reading, during reading and after reading activities for each title. Further development by the teacher may be required. Postreading activities focus on comprehension of the plot, but often do not reinforce the strategies and literary concepts introduced throughout the readers. The action readers are levelled from Grade 1.5 to Grade 6 readability to facilitate successful independent reading.

Comments:

- The story topics, pictures and language may limit the range of students who find the books interesting and relevant.
- Sensitive topics include bullying, stealing, gambling, slavery and computer hacking.

This Scholastic Read XL series includes a teacher's guide, student text, student workbook, assessment guide and CD-ROM. The teacher's guide contains a program overview, lesson plans, study/research skills and support resources for test-taking, reading comprehension and vocabulary development. It is well organized and laid out with many suggestions and activities for developing reading competency and it includes ESL support. The student text has many colour pictures and illustrations. It is relevant and engaging, with stories on topics, such as eating and cooking bugs, ordering from menus, sports and animals, that will appeal to students in Knowledge and Employability courses. The student practice book is organized into vocabulary, word study, comprehension, ESL support, writing and grammar, and real-world reading. The assessment guide, which has only multiple choice questions, is the weakest link in a very strong, effective kit. The CD-ROM is an electronic text collection with stories and other downloadable selections.

Comments:

- This resource includes a number of topics that might be sensitive for some students, including peer pressure, violent incidents, magic and the occult. Consideration should be given to family and community standards.
- Also included are descriptions of incidents of prejudice and discrimination. Students would benefit from class discussion to understand the historical context for these.

The assessment guide, with only multiple choice questions, is the weakest link in a very strong, effective kit. The CD-ROM is an electronic text collection with stories and other downloadable selections.

Comments:

- Considerable classroom discussion is recommended to ensure that students understand the cultural references presented in this resource, particularly with reference to the status of women in other countries and cultures.
- This resource has an American bias.

Cautions:

- The selection Breaking the Colour Barrier contains negative references to blacks made in the context of the American civil rights movement in the 1950s and 1960s. Class discussion is recommended to ensure that students understand the context for these references.
- The use of the term Eskimo, rather than the politically correct term Inuit, and the use of slang terms to refer to the mentally ill will require explanations and clarifications.
- Reading selections may include fantasy, the occult, gangs and incidents of violence.
- Selections in the student book called "more to read" have not been reviewed or authorized by Alberta Education.

The Sprint Reading Blue Collections (300 series) is appropriate for students in grades 8 and 9 Knowledge and Employability language arts courses. It includes fiction and nonfiction in a variety of genres, including poetry, short stories and novels. Titles in the library pack include Tiger Woods: Driving Force, Martial Arts, Staying Strong, Sharks, And the Winner Is..., Watchers Rewind, Drum Beats and The Dog Ate My Homework. These are high interest books on a variety of topics that will meet a range of student needs. The student workbook and library pack encourage students to predict, synthesize and evaluate. The student workbook includes vocabulary, word study, comprehension, fluency and writing activities. The teacher resource is an effective tool, offering extra supports for before, during and after reading and assessment.

Comments:

- The placement guide is useful in determining and evaluating the reading ability of students for them to use these resources. However, this is based on the American Lexile Framework and does not correspond to Canadian grade levels.

Cautions:

- Watchers: Rewind is a fantasy novel about time travel and may not be appropriate for all students.
- Staying Strong contains several inspirational selections, although some students may be troubled by the selection that describes a teen's experiences with cancer.
- Alberta Education strongly recommends that teachers preview these resources. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community.
- Drum Beats contains a reference to the author's Web site, which has not been reviewed or authorized by Alberta Education. Teachers are encouraged to preview this Web site before using it with students.

This resource provides readings in various formats—short stories, novels, fiction and nonfiction—that are designed to appeal to a variety of learners. Sprint Reading meets reading, writing and personal developmental outcomes in the program of studies. It develops numerous skills for a balanced language arts program, such as vocabulary development, phonics and writing. The books are easy to read and are on topics relevant to most students. The shorter books use illustrations and pictures to create interest and assist reading comprehension.

Comments:

- Outcomes in the listening, viewing, representing and communicating strands are not addressed.

Cautions:

- The resource has an American bias, including American racial perspectives on Blacks and Native Americans.
- People with disabilities are occasionally referred to in slang terms, which may seem disrespectful. Class discussion around these topics is encouraged.
- References to fantasy and the occult in Watchers Last Stop and violent events in Three Thrillers from Poe: Master of Horror may be sensitive topics for some students.
- In Forest Fires, readers are referred to Web sites for further information. Alberta Education has not reviewed or authorized the referenced Web sites. Teachers are encouraged to investigate these before allowing students to use them.

This resource provides students with interesting topics and is written at a level they can comprehend. Student readers are both fiction and nonfiction and include the titles Skateboarding, Hostage, It's All Greek to Me, Help! I'm Trapped in a Professional Wrestler's Body, Who Stole the Wizard of Oz, Red Means Good Fortune, Christopher Reeve: Superhero and Answer Girl. The student workbook contains exercises on phonics, reading comprehension, writing and vocabulary development for each story. The teacher resource provides an excellent starting point for teachers who may not be familiar with the language arts curriculum. Prereading activities, such as developing background and predicting through to postreading, provide a good springboard to further development of these skills.

Comments:

- Activities in the teacher resource and student workbook may need to be supported with additional activities and assignments.
- No blackline masters are available.
- The titles Help! I'm Trapped in a Professional Wrestler's Body and It's All Greek to Me have elements of magic, violence and irreverent humour that is not intended to be disrespectful.
- In Help! I'm Trapped in a Professional Wrestler's Body a bully is threatened, which could provide a useful starting point for class discussion on bullying and appropriate ways to handle bullies.
- The books on skateboarding and wrestling introduce stunts that could potentially be dangerous if students tried to replicate them.
- This resource contains American references and content, including references to American First Nations.

This series of short books consists of adaptations of classic literature. The books cover a wide range of forms, topics and writing styles, all presented at a lower reading level. Frankenstein, Gulliver's Travels, Huckleberry Finn, The Iliad, Julius Caesar and A Midsummer Night's Dream are all recommended for Grade 10 students. In these books, the formal language of the classics as they were written has been maintained, as well as the "thinking" of the periods; however, the selections are formatted for easy-reading, with shorter chapters to encourage completion. Each book is divided into six or seven chapters, some having an epilogue and all having a glossary of terms. Each of the chapters is approximately six pages in length interspersed generously with full-page, full-colour artist's renditions of scenes. The covers are also done in full colour to engage students. The teacher's guide provides author information, personal response questions, comprehension questions, critical thinking questions connected to literary terms, writing activities focusing on particular skills, and an answer key. It also includes a summary of each story, which would be useful to keep on hand when students are choosing stories; there are no summaries provided on the back covers.

Comments:

- No blackline masters are included, and questions posed in the teacher's guide would have to be provided to students by the teacher.

Cautions:

- Alberta Education strongly recommends that teachers review activities in these resources prior to using them with students. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community due to some of the subjects raised.

The covers are also done in full colour to engage students. The teacher's guide provides author information, personal response questions, comprehension questions, critical thinking questions connected to literary terms, writing activities focusing on particular skills, and an answer key. It also includes a summary of each story, which would be useful to keep on hand when students are choosing stories; there are no summaries provided on the back covers.

Comments:

- No blackline masters are included, and questions posed in the teacher's guide would have to be provided to students by the teacher.

Cautions:

- Alberta Education strongly recommends that teachers review activities in these resources prior to using them with students. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community due to some of the subjects raised.

This series consists of shortened versions of classic literature, adapted to a grades 4 to 6 reading level. The series illustrates different literary periods and writing styles. The Odyssey, Romeo and Juliet, Sherlock Holmes, The Time Machine and Tom Sawyer are all recommended for Grade 10 students. Each book begins with three introductory activities requiring students to reflect on their prior knowledge and personal experiences. After the story, there are nine factual questions based on information from the book. These are followed by five or six interpretive questions to stimulate critical thinking and literary skills. These questions can also be used for group discussion. Finally, there are approximately five writing activities to enrich students' understanding of the literary work.

This resource is the story of a young Aboriginal girl named Sigwan. The 13-minute video addresses the issues of exclusion and prejudice that exist within many communities worldwide. It is a short story illustrating the transformation of these negative feelings and concepts to a positive feeling of acceptance. Relationships between nature, animals, humans and Aboriginal culture are demonstrated.

These resources address the English Language Arts topics of reading, writing and viewing. The resources use a variety of articles to help students develop and practise the skills of skimming and scanning at the middle or advanced level. The aim is to make students understand the purpose of skimming and scanning, and to increase their reading comprehension by improving these skills. For each level, the skimming section consists of ten lessons, each followed by ten questions. Students are asked to skim an article, record their time and obtain their reading speed by converting their time to words per minute using a chart provided.

Students are then asked to complete the ten comprehension questions and mark their responses. The scanning sections consist of 15 lessons with ten questions each. Students are presented with practical, everyday materials such as forms, charts, lists and schedules. They are asked to scan the material for the answers and record their time, as well as the number of correct answers, at the bottom of the page. The resources include a summary profile where students can track their progress by recording their results from each lesson. The accompanying teacher's guide provides an answer key, along with the reading level of each article.

Comments:

- When using these resources with Knowledge and Employability students, the focus should be on practising skimming and scanning techniques to improve reading skills.
- Having students time themselves adds to the difficulty of the task. Teachers may choose to disregard the timing component or have someone else time students, for example by having students work in pairs.
- Students' times on scanning comprehension questions may be misleading; some students may take longer due to a difficulty in putting answers into a written format, not because of a lack of comprehension.
- The resources contain a number of American references that would need to be replaced with Canadian information.

Most of the teenage protagonists in these Alberta-based novels are First Nations, Métis or Inuit and male. Some central characters have physical disabilities and are portrayed positively as strong individuals. The novels are 100–125 pages long and have large print. In sports such as hockey, soccer and basketball, descriptions of game strategies, plays and game highlights are detailed and will be appreciated by the sports-minded reader. Characters in the novels face many challenges, including dealing with parents' divorce and remarriage, moving to a new school, creating new friends and coping with bullying. There is learning in the way that the individual dilemmas are resolved. The novels' themes include the need to be true to yourself and follow your dreams, sportsmanship, dealing with bullies, facing discrimination, young romance and jealousy. Many of the stories in the series have received literary awards.

This set of resources covers a variety of essential topics in reading and writing, paralleling the outcomes for English language arts. Basic Skills in Reading includes sections on fiction, nonfiction, poetry and drama, and prose and visual information. The text begins with an Inventory Assessment, composed of five articles with five or six questions each, to help students assess their own skills and knowledge. The results from the inventory can be compiled on a Correlation Chart, which identifies areas that students need to work on and points them toward specific pages for help. The inventory is followed by four units. Each unit begins with background information and reading strategies, followed by stories or articles. Concepts are reinforced and tested during reading, with questions interspersed throughout the article, and again after reading, with approximately 15 follow-up questions after each article. At the end of each unit there is a review test made up of three articles and six or seven questions. Each unit also includes a section on Reading at Work that consists of one article and five questions. At the end of the workbook there is a comprehensive post-test made up of five articles with six questions each. The results from these questions are compiled on another Correlation Chart, allowing students to gauge their progress and identify areas of continued need. There is an answer key provided for all questions throughout the workbook.

Basic Skills in Writing contains four units dealing with essay and creative writing, workplace and personal writing, and grammar. Unit 1 covers the writing process, narrative writing, expository writing and persuasive writing. Unit 2 focuses on careers, covering letter writing, job search writing, workplace writing, explanatory writing and reports. Unit 3 deals specifically with grammar, focusing on mechanics, usage and sentence structures. Each of the first three units contains ELA outcomes, a section on Writing at Work, a unit review and a writing connection activity. Unit 4 is a Writing Handbook containing numerous student checklists and practice activities. The workbook ends with a comprehensive post-test of 100 questions and a written essay assignment. The results from the test can be compiled on a Correlation Chart similar to those used in the reading workbook. There is an answer key provided for all questions throughout the workbook.

Comments:

- Due to the number and level of activities in these workbooks, they are recommended for grades 10 to 12.
 - Unit 2 in the writing booklet could be used for grades 8 to 12 due to its clarity and degree of guided student direction.
 - This resource is American based. Teachers will want to replace some American references with equivalent Canadian ones (e.g., zip codes with postal codes).

This series consists of ten individual mystery stories in small novelette form, each bound in full-colour softcover. The stories are set in situations that students would be familiar with, and the plots revolve around real-life experiences worthy of discussion. Various reading levels are represented. The Mystery Magazine, in glossy, teen-magazine format, engages students in quick reading segments, cartoons, puzzles and a word search. The stories are interspersed with suitable pen and ink-wash drawings. The teacher's guide provides rationales, reproducible blackline masters, a synopsis of each story, vocabulary and answer keys to worksheets. Blackline masters are formatted for clarity and ease of use. The guide is clearly divided into pre-reading focus, suggested applications of blackline masters and follow-up activities.

Comments:

- The Mystery Magazine is slightly outdated in its representation of television and movie content. The fashions shown on individuals in pictures are dated as well; however, the basic content in the magazine is appropriate.
- There is little Canadian content other than one story set in the Canadian Rockies. One form in the worksheets requires a zip code instead of a postal code.
- The teacher's guide does not provide suggestions for use of media or technology.

This series consists of ten individual science fiction novelettes. The topics in these books will be of high interest to most students in this age group. The books include life-like sketches of teens on each page, making them suitable for low level readers. The novelettes are accompanied by a science fiction magazine that consists of short articles relating the books to current movies and to teen contexts. Illustrations, photographs and activities set the scene for connecting the books to current happenings. The teacher's guide provides a variety of strategies for connecting the materials in the books to basic English language arts subject matter (e.g., vocabulary building).

This resource allows students to view authentic application forms and workplace documents from a variety of occupations to see what levels of reading, writing and document use skills are necessary for success. The occupations selected (e.g., personnel clerk, residential installer, repairs and service) are ones that would be suitable and of interest to most Knowledge and Employability students. The resource explains the differences between classroom reading and workplace reading (reading to learn versus reading to do), and discusses how documents are used in the workplace and where writing skills may be needed. The selected occupations are each placed along a clear, easy to follow rating scale (from simple to complex) for each of the above skills as well. Blackline masters of application forms and documents are included, as well as a guide on how to obtain them in one's own area.

This series of workbooks focuses on spelling from a Grade 3 to 8 level. The workbooks could provide a high level of success and accomplishment for struggling students due to the clear exercises, prompts and teaching resources that are included. Before using the resource, students would take a placement test to determine at which level in the series to begin. The first three levels involve learning six words per lesson for 30 weeks, with a review test every fifth lesson. The next three levels involve the same format, but with eight words per lesson instead of six. There are four workbook pages per lesson—one page per day. The last page of every lesson provides a dictation test in which students respond to sentences that are provided. Each level has a corresponding teacher's edition with the answer key enclosed. There is also a chart at the back of each workbook for students to record their results. This resource could be used for self-directed student learning or teacher-led study. Workbooks could be used in their entirety or run off as individual blackline masters as needed.

Thinking Tools for Kids consists of 89 blackline masters incorporating 32 tools to help students develop comprehension and study skills. Some of the blackline masters deal with the same tool at different student levels. The tools are closely linked to specific outcomes in the Knowledge and Employability programs of study, allowing students to use these tools in their language arts, social studies and science classes as they progress through school. The tools are organized according to the following outcomes: generating and identifying ideas; describing, comparing and contrasting; classifying; exploring whole-part relationships; sequencing; problem solving; organizing information; computer-based tools; and sample assessment rubrics. A curriculum link to language arts, social studies and science is included at the back of the book.

Comments:

This resource is a documentary about Chief Dan George that provides a comprehensive and sensitive overview for teachers addressing Aboriginal issues in the social studies curriculum or working with Aboriginal students. It treats historical and contemporary issues with respect and insight, including residential schools and the policy of assimilation, portrayal of Aboriginal people by the media, social problems, cultural identity loss, reserves and genocide. Chief Dan George was a writer, speech giver, storyteller and Hollywood actor. He is portrayed as a role model and an initiator of change for the image and cultural renewal of First Nations people. The video is based largely on conversations, interviews and movie clips from Little Big Man and Outlaw Josey Wales.

Comments:

- The pace of the video is slow. Knowledge and Employability students will focus better if they are prepared and if clips are discussed as they are viewed.

Cautions:

- Alberta Education strongly recommends that teachers preview this resource, as it raises historical and contemporary issues facing Aboriginal people: identity loss, prejudice, social problems, residential schools, assimilation and genocide.
- Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community.

Today's Teen resource package includes a hardcover student text, a student workbook, a teacher resource guide, a CD-ROM, a transparency package, a hardcover teacher edition, and a student workbook annotated teacher edition. The resource promotes success in everyday living and the text and worksheets are complementary. There are eleven units in the text including: building personal potential, exploring careers, relationship skills, friend and family relationships, children, consumer/money management, personal health and wellness, food and nutrition, safety in the kitchen, clothing, and housing interiors. The resource presents information clearly and with simple illustrations. Today's Teen could be used as a cross grade resource using specific chapters at certain grade levels. Teacher package gives options, suggested time spans for teachers, is well organized and teachers can use with "minimal" preparation. The teacher's guide has an overview, curriculum correlation chart, planning chart, section on accommodating various learning styles, section on additional activities and student activities. The teacher answer help provided a variety of assessment tools such as crosswords, short answer, and word searches. The test bank was easy to modify. multimedia use is provided.

Comments:

- An American book using American agencies, resources and measurements which would need to be replaced with names of Alberta organizations etc.
- There is nothing included for record keeping in the package.
- The Career Exploration was generally unrealistic at Knowledge and Employability achievement levels. Construction skills focused on sewing at an advanced level.

This Canadian novel recounts the adventures of two sisters who purchase a magical book. As the sisters discover, the book gives powers of extra-sensory perception (ESP) to anyone who places a personal possession inside. The book is written at a lower level and is easy for students to read.

Comments:

- The resource does not include a teacher's guide.

Cautions:

- The topic of ESP may need a mature introduction for some students.
 - The names of some of the people in the story may be perceived as creating or reinforcing negative images of immigrant groups.

This resource consists of a set of student readers, each containing 12 stories. The stories deal with different geographical locations, and are thematically grouped into five types: seas, mountains, jungles, deserts and polar regions. Each story centres around historical figures (individuals or groups of people) who had to deal with a situation specific to their geographical location. The stories are written at an appropriate level and are engaging to read. The books include quality photographs or artist renditions, and full colour is used throughout. Each book begins with a world map isolating the locations found in the stories, followed by smaller, more detailed maps. These maps are accompanied by exercises to teach students how to read and understand maps. The resource includes a variety of exercises and strategies, including fill-in-the-blank, true or false, fact or opinion, vocabulary questions and puzzles. There is an answer key and a glossary at the back of each book, and a chart for noting student scores is provided. These resources could be used for teaching map skills or for introducing explorers.

Comments:

- Blackline masters are not available; since the books contain both the stories and the workbook-like exercises, students will have to record their responses elsewhere.

These workbooks use articles and word studies to address the subject of vocabulary, specifically supporting the ELA outcomes on using context clues and analyzing unfamiliar words. The middle level workbook is appropriate for grades 8 and 9, and the advanced workbook for grades 10 to 12. Each workbook contains 32 lessons, alternating between related nonfiction articles (e.g., one on Laurel and Hardy followed by one on Masters of Comedy) and word study lessons that link the vocabulary and concepts used in the articles. Every fifth lesson provides review and extension activities to reinforce concepts. There is a glossary in the back of each workbook, along with a Personal Words section where students may record their own choice of words for reference.

The Wild Side series consists of short nonfiction articles dealing with unusual events and subjects from around the world. Each book in the series contains three units, each with five lessons. Throughout the nine volumes, the articles cover diverse, high-interest material, including the disappearance of Jimmy Hoffa, killer bees, cryonic death, Bonnie and Clyde, and the World Trade Center bombing. Articles are followed by a group of four reading comprehension exercises and three critical thinking exercises. At the end of each lesson, a personal response prompt invites reflection and personal assessment. The articles could be used for timed reading exercises. Tables and graphs are included in each of the volumes for students to chart their progress. The glossy, full-colour covers are visually appealing and engaging. Graphics within the text are photographs from, or related to, the subject or event. The accompanying teacher booklet provides teaching notes and an answer key for the exercises.

The Workplace Health and Safety Teacher Resource Binders and Teacher Toolkit were developed as a joint initiative by Alberta Education and Alberta Human Resources and Employment to support teachers in the delivery of workplace health and safety outcomes. The resource actively promotes the safety of all workers in Alberta, particularly young workers, and documents Alberta health and safety legislation and regulations. Students will become aware of their rights and responsibilities with respect to workplace health and safety concerns.

The two-binder set of workplace health and safety information is divided into seven chapters: legislation, health and safety management systems, physical hazards, chemical hazards, biological hazards, psychosocial hazards and ergonomics. Each chapter includes topic-specific content that is followed by a supplemental information section with course-specific, industry-specific or occupation-specific information. Teacher notes, handouts, overheads and additional resources are also included with each chapter. The accompanying Workplace Health and Safety Teacher Toolkit complements the resource binders with posters, publications, cards and CDs. The toolkit is organized into nine sections: statistics, videos, posters, cards, publications, general, employment and standards information, workers' compensation information and other.

Comments:

- This resource has the potential for transfer to any school or workplace setting.
 - The resource contains reference to a workplace fatality (page 12 of the legislation section) that was widely reported in the Alberta media. Teacher judgement is advised in the use of this reference as students who knew the deceased or were related to him might be in the classroom.

This small folder (4" x 8") provides ten steps to aid clear and effective writing. The folder opens to a series of tabs. Each tab, when flipped open, identifies a tip to aid writing, including the organization of a writing project, time management, identifying the audience, gathering information, organizing ideas and material, writing the first draft, style and grammar, and editing. This resource may be used at the beginning of a project and throughout the project as a just-in-time reference.

Writing at Work is a resource that comes from observing and studying the writing experiences of employees. Purposes for writing in the workplace are usually practical and related to action. The conditions under which writing is done often make the writing task challenging. This teacher resource contains chapters on daybooks, memos, e-mail, entry forms, logbooks, reports, bulletins, press releases, newsletters, and regulations, policies and procedures.

Each chapter begins with an overview of the workplace task in which that writing format is used. This is followed by a section that lists examples of settings and occupations where the writing formats are used. Complexity is described by levels given to the writing formats addressed in the chapter. A variety of sample tasks demonstrate the writing and reading skills required for a range of occupations. Under the heading "Features," the purpose, audience, content, organizational structure, format and writing style are considered. A section on activities provides an opportunity to perform the writing and reading tasks associated with a particular writing format. Many activities begin with a critical thinking exercise.
